

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

The Childers Professorship of Irish History

Faculty of History

Closing date: 25 October 2025

Job Reference: JJ46761

The Childers Professorship of Irish History

Background to the role

This is a new Professorship, generously endowed by the Department of Foreign Affairs of Ireland. Known as the Childers Chair, the post is named in honour of Robert Erskine Childers and Erskine Hamilton Childers, both distinguished University alumni and the latter the Fourth President of Ireland.

The Professorship is intended to further the study of Irish History at Cambridge and to deepen the understanding of British-Irish relations, especially in the context of recent turbulence. We are seeking an outstanding scholar, an inspiring teacher and an academic leader with the capacity to forge connections, foster excellence, and to establish Cambridge as a global centre for the study of Irish History.

In recent years, Irish history at Cambridge has been nurtured by the innovative research and teaching initiatives of John Morrill, Eugenio Biagini, Richard Bourke, Paul Warde, and Niamh Gallagher, among others. There is a well-established interdisciplinary Group for Irish Studies and a flourishing Modern Irish History Seminar, as well as the Seminar in Early Modern British and Irish History. We have organised annual conferences and eye-witness events, often in conjunction with the Department of Foreign Affairs and the Churchill Archives, such as the forthcoming colloquium on the 1985 Anglo-Irish Agreement (November 2025).

The Faculty of History has been successful in attracting external funding for Irish History projects, including the 1641

Depositions Project (John Morrill), a Leverhulme Senior Research Fellowship by Eugenio Biagini on 'Religious minorities and national identity in southern Ireland since 1912' (2017-20), and the Future Leaders Fellowship currently held by Niamh Gallagher on 'Ireland and the "ends" of the British Empire, 1886 to the present.' The Childers Professor will be expected to engage in and support further collaborative projects in the field.

The postholder will build on this strong tradition of Irish studies and catalyse burgeoning interest in the field of Irish History, both within the University and beyond. This will involve running undergraduate courses, training M.Phil. and PhD students, convening the Modern Irish History research seminar, organising conferences, and interacting with the Department of Foreign Affairs of Ireland.

Standard Duties1) Teaching and research

The Professor will be required to give instruction in Irish History and in particular to perform the following duties:

- i) to offer a variety of forms of teaching for undergraduates and postgraduates including lecturing, seminar teaching, small-group teaching and dissertation advising.
- ii) to undertake original research and advanced work in their subject.
- iii) to assist students and offer leadership and encouragement to our substantial postgraduate community.

2) Assessment

The Professor will normally examine at the undergraduate, MPhil, and PhD level every year when not on leave. Examining will include grading student exams, papers and dissertations, along with conducting vivas/oral examinations for PhD students.

3) Supervision

The Professor will be required to act as the supervisor of postgraduate students as and when requested. The current Faculty expectation is three to four MPhil students per year. As with other named Chairs, we would expect the holder to take on a full quota of PhD students, rising quickly to 6; our recommended maximum across the Faculty is for colleagues not to exceed a total of 10 supervisees (including MPhil and PhD students).

4) Administration

Administrative duties are shared equitably among the teaching members of the Faculty. Professors are expected to play significant roles from time to time on the Faculty Board and Faculty Committees dealing with such matters as academic and other appointments, admission of graduate students, the development of research and teaching, and the assessment of undergraduate and postgraduate work. They are also encouraged to accept appointment to University Committees.

Person Specification

Candidates will be considered for the post on the basis of the following selection criteria, which they are asked to address in their application.

The Faculty of History

The History Faculty has been ranked one of the three best history departments in the world in the QS World University Rankings over the past decade, and the best in the UK in the Guardian Best Universities guide.

The Faculty's academic staff (teaching officers employed by either the University or the Colleges, and postdoctoral fellows) number more than one hundred historians, and constitute one of the largest and most diverse history departments in the world. The expertise of the Faculty spans more than two millennia, straddles the globe and exemplifies the rich variety of sub-disciplines that constitutes history today.

There are around 550 undergraduates studying for the BA in History, along with nearly two hundred studying for joint degrees in History and Politics and History and Modern Languages. There are over 150 MPhil students each year across the Faculty's eight MPhil programmes. And there are around 200 PhD students, perhaps the largest History doctoral cohort in the world. James Stirling's History Faculty Building (1968)

is 'listed' as architecturally significant; The Stirling building has recently been vacated to allow for a full refurbishment. The Seeley Library which has over 100,000 volumes; has temporarily moved into a dedicated and newly designed space in the West Room within the University Library until building work is completed.

The University Library, is a copyright and lending library with more than eight million books and countless archival collections.

The Faculty has more than thirty specialist research seminars and is divided into eight Subject Groups: American; Ancient and Medieval; Economic and Social; Early Modern; Modern British and Irish; Modern European; Political Thought and Intellectual History; and World. All staff members belong to one or more Subject Groups.

The School of the Humanities and Social Sciences

The School of the Humanities and Social Sciences is, in terms of student numbers, the largest of the six Schools in the University and is currently comprised of:

- Faculty of Economics
- Faculty of Education
- Faculty of History
- Faculty of Human, Social and Political Science, which is made up of: the Departments of Archaeology, Social Anthropology, Sociology, Politics and International Studies (incorporating the Centres of African Studies, Development Studies, Latin American Studies, South Asian Studies and Gender Studies)
- Faculty of Law, including the Institute of Criminology and the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law
- Department of History and Philosophy of Science, including the Whipple Museum of the History of Science
- Department of Land Economy.

The School covers a wide range of disciplines with differing methodologies, from highly quantitative analysis of 'big data' to ethnography and the analysis of the material culture and thought of past societies. The geographical range is equally broad, with Centres of African, Latin American and South Asian Studies, and specialists within each Department or Faculty.

Each institution has its own well developed research profile. The School is participating in university-wide Strategic Research Initiatives such as public health, global food security, energy and conservation which bring the insights of social sciences to bear on some of the major issues facing the world today.

Cambridge is one of the world's leading centres for science, technology and medicine, and the social sciences are now playing an increasingly important role in understanding the social, political and economic contexts.

The University

The University of Cambridge is consistently ranked one of the best universities in the world, achieving academic excellence through its Faculties, Departments and other Institutions, together with the 31 Colleges.

The University is renowned for its record of discovery and innovation. It is one of the great institutions, with a regional, national and global reach, attracting the very best and brightest minds. Our staff and students shape the world around us for the better: we attract and partner with like-minded people.

Whether contributing to the development of new anti-cancer drugs, adding to the understanding of how black holes are formed, revolutionising the study of ancient settlements, convening academic expertise to offer solutions to the climate crisis, or analysing public attitudes towards democracy around the world, the University's research is remarkable in its breadth, quality and impact. The University also sits at the heart of Europe's largest technology cluster and has catalysed more than 1,500 high-tech companies. And yet what inspires our 24,000 students and 13,000 staff is not what has already been achieved, but what is possible in the future.

The education and experience of our students, based on a partnership between the University's academic Departments and Faculties and the 31 Colleges, is second to none. Every student is a member of one of the Colleges, each a community of students, academics and staff drawn from across the University's comprehensive range of subject areas.

The University is a self-governing community, with a system for decision-making that provides a high degree of accountability and transparency to its members. Each Department and Faculty is part of one of six academic Schools, but each of them, and each individual academic, has a great deal of autonomy. The Colleges are independent and self-governing, working in a symbiotic relationship with the University.

The University has a number of Institutions that are independent of any Faculty or Department and are not part of the academic Schools. These include the Institute of Continuing Education (which provides high-quality education to adults throughout their lives), the Fitzwilliam Museum, Kettle's Yard (an historic house and gallery that holds important collections of modern art) and the University Library. In addition to their diverse contributions to University and public life, these non-School Institutions are also important centres of teaching and research.

Cambridge University Press & Assessment provides academic publishing, examinations and learning materials worldwide, supporting the dissemination of research, academic development at school and in higher education, and international student mobility. Legally, the Press & Assessment is a department of the University. It provides very important funds to invest in the academic purposes of the University.

The University has made truly remarkable contributions to the sum of human understanding, with breakthrough ideas and discoveries that have changed the way we understand ourselves, our planet, and the universe around us. Yet the global and national contexts in which it operates are fast-changing and increasingly filled with uncertainty. In a world that is becoming - politically, economically, socially, and technologically – ever more interconnected but even less equal, the University's mission – “to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence” – has never been more relevant.

About Us

The University is one of the world's leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country's highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit undergraduate students, provide student accommodation and pastoral support and deliver small group teaching for undergraduates.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany's Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University's make-up.

“Through its outstanding education, research and innovation, the University of Cambridge has made – and continues to make – a lasting contribution to human knowledge and is flourishing. By working at the University of Cambridge, you will be joining a vibrant community of students, scholars and professional services staff committed to supporting and enhancing the University's mission to contribute to society.”

*Professor Deborah Prentice,
Vice Chancellor 2023*

Working at the University

Working at Cambridge you will join a diverse, talented and innovative community, with more than 24,000 students and over 13,000 staff from all walks of life and corners of the world.

The University continually explores strategies to attract and retain the best people. It is committed to supporting its staff to achieve their best. We are a fair, diverse and inclusive society and we believe our staff are our greatest asset. There is strong commitment to developing institutional leadership and supporting and encouraging staff development at all levels.

The University offers a variety of roles including academic, research, professional, managerial and support roles. We also offer extensive benefits and excellent learning opportunities within a stimulating working environment.

The University's estate is undergoing the most significant transformation in its history. Cambridge has been able to create a science and technology campus to the west of the city centre, and is expanding further to the north west of Cambridge including investing in affordable homes for University key workers and community facilities. Even with their continued development, the University remains within walking or cycling distance across the campus. The University is a major partner on the Cambridge Biomedical Campus and continues to redevelop its historic city centre sites demonstrating a clear determination to ensure that we can offer the best facilities and opportunities for our staff and students.

Equality, Diversity and Inclusion

The University has built its excellence on the diversity of its staff and student community. We aim to be a leader in fostering equality and inclusion, and in promoting respect and a sense of belonging for all. We encourage applications from all sections of society. All appointments are made on the basis of merit. We have an Equal Opportunities Policy, along with a range of diversity groups, including the Women's Staff Network, Race Equality Network and LGBT+ Staff Network. More details are available here:

<http://www.equality.admin.cam.ac.uk/>

The University has a bronze Race Equality Charter award, with a framework for improving the representation, progression and success of minority ethnic staff and students within higher education. Furthermore, the University's silver Athena swan award recognises and celebrates good practice in recruiting, retaining and promoting gender equality.

The University also hosts the Cambridge Festival, which is a great opportunity to get your first taste of public engagement, through volunteering, supporting hands-on activities or proposing a talk.

Development opportunities

We support new employees to settle in through various activities as well as supporting their professional and career development on an ongoing basis. Our Personal and Professional Development (PPD) team provide development opportunities for all University employees, including face-to-face sessions, online learning modules and webinars. All employees also have unlimited access to LinkedIn Learning to support their development. Both new and existing employees can undertake funded Apprenticeships, which lead to a range of vocational and professional qualifications. We offer reduced staff fees for University of Cambridge graduate courses and the opportunity to attend lectures and seminars held by University departments and institutions. A range of University training providers also offer specialist learning and development in their own areas e.g. teaching and learning, digital literacy, finance, health and wellbeing, safety.

College Membership

The University, the Faculties and Departments, and the Colleges are linked in a complicated historical relationship that is mutually beneficial but not simple. Students (both graduate and undergraduate) are admitted by one of the 31 Colleges, although in the case of graduate students the Faculties and Departments determine admissions before the Colleges are involved. Almost all undergraduates, and many graduate students, live in a College.

The teaching of undergraduate students is shared between the Colleges and the Faculties and Departments, with the Colleges arranging small group teaching ("supervision") and the Departments providing lecturing, laboratory classes, and advanced supervisions. Most academic staff will also be invited to join a College as a teaching or professorial fellow.

Membership of a College adds an important social and intellectual dimension which many of the University's academic community find attractive. Most colleges expect their fellows to take part in undergraduate supervision and College administration. Appointment to a College fellowship is a separate matter from a University appointment, for which the College provides modest remuneration additional to University salary. It is not compulsory for academic staff to be a member of a College.

Further advice can be obtained from The Chair of the Faculty/Head of Department or senior colleagues.

The Scheme for newly-appointed University Officers seeking a College Fellowship is set out at: UTO Scheme | Office of Intercollegiate Services \(cam.ac.uk\)
