Background to the role

The Moran Professorship of Conservation and Development was established in 2006 to understand conservation challenges and develop inter-disciplinary solutions for the protection of life on Earth, addressing cross-cutting themes of interest to both the social and natural sciences. The inaugural holder of this chair was Professor Bill Adams, who retired in September 2020 after a distinguished career in the Department of Geography. Cambridge provides an exceptionally stimulating collaborative environment for conservation teaching and research, hosting the Cambridge Conservation Initiative, which is a globally unique collaboration between nine leading environmental organisations and the University of Cambridge. The Department of Geography hosts the University’s Conservation Research Institute and the flagship Master’s in Conservation Leadership, and two newly launched MPhil programmes in Anthropocene Studies and Holocene Climates. There is an active interest in conservation research in the Department, especially in its Vital Geographies and Biogeography and Biogeomorphology thematic research groups, as well as the Political Ecology cluster. The Department is ranked consistently among the top three Geography Departments internationally, and has a research environment that is structured to promote engagement with many of the world’s most important challenges – including biodiversity conservation, climate change, and global inequalities. The Department is committed to equality, diversity and inclusion, and to addressing the structures of power that have historically shaped the production and sharing of knowledge in the field of conservation, and Geography more widely.

The Department of Geography has a long-established international reputation as one of the leading centres of innovative geographical thought and education and in 2019 celebrated one hundred years of teaching Geography in Cambridge. The Department is a friendly and inclusive scholarly community with wide-ranging research interests spanning the natural and social sciences and the humanities. Incorporating the Scott Polar Research Institute, and based on two central Cambridge sites, at Downing Place and Lensfield Road, it has approximately 45 academic, 40 research and 45 support staff at any one time.

Teaching
The Department delivers a Tripos (undergraduate degree) with an intake of approximately 100 students per year and has a vibrant postgraduate community of approximately 150 students studying at PhD level and on Master’s courses in Geography, Polar Studies, Anthropocene Studies, Holocene Climates and Conservation Leadership.

The Department was ranked top in the UK’s 2020 Complete University Guide in the category of Geography and Environmental Science and third in the 2019 QS World University Rankings for Geography. Visit our website at http://www.geog.cam.ac.uk

Research
The Department’s research activities are organised into six thematic research groups: Vital Geographies, Infrastructural Geographies, Geographies of Knowledge, Biogeography and Biogeomorphology, Climate and Environmental Dynamics, and Glaciology and Glacial Geology. These overlap with two centres of excellence – the Cambridge Group for the History of Population and Social Structure, co-hosted with the Faculty of History, and the Scott Polar Research Institute. The Department also provides the home for the University of Cambridge Conservation Research Institute.

The Department’s research is aided by well-supported laboratories, field equipment and high-performance computing services, supporting a combination of fieldwork, laboratory analysis and experiments, remote sensing and computational modelling.

The last UK Research Excellence Framework exercise (2014), based on an overall metric measuring publications, research environment and societal impact judged as ‘4-star’ (world-leading), ranked the Department second in the country.

The University

The University of Cambridge is one of the world’s oldest and most successful universities. We are a renowned centre for research, education, and scholarship that makes a significant contribution to society. The University is consistently ranked amongst the top universities in the world. Our affiliates have won more Nobel Prizes than any other University.

Our sustained pursuit of academic excellence is built on a long history of first-class teaching and research within a distinctive collegiate system. For eight centuries our ideas and innovations have shaped the world. Our principal goal is to remain one of the world’s leading universities in an increasingly competitive global higher education sector. Today the University of Cambridge is at the centre of a cluster of over 4,300 businesses employing 58,000 people.

Our capital investment projects include the West Cambridge site, the North West Cambridge development and the growth of the Biomedical Campus in the south of the city. The North West Cambridge development includes the opening of a primary school – the first in the UK to be managed by a University. So we are deeply embedded in, and committed to serving, our local community. These are all conspicuous signs of a University that is not only adapting to new needs, but also anticipating the future.

Our mission is to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence. Our core values are:

- freedom of thought and expression; and
- freedom from discrimination.
About Us

The University is one of the world’s leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country’s highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit students, provide student accommodation and deliver small group teaching.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching and conducting research.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany’s Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University’s make-up.

“Cambridge graduates and researchers have made – and continue to make – a colossal contribution to human knowledge and the understanding of the world around us. Their work touches on the lives and livelihoods of everyone from patients diagnosed with life-threatening diseases, to residents of areas critically affected by climate change, to children growing up in conflict zones. It has a lasting impact on our society, our economy and our culture: the world is truly a better place thanks to their efforts.”

Stephen Toope, Vice Chancellor 2019
Working at the University

Working at Cambridge you will join a diverse, talented and innovative community, with more than 18,000 students and over 16,000 staff from all walks of life and corners of the world.

We offer a variety of roles including academic, research, professional, managerial and support roles. We also offer extensive benefits and excellent learning opportunities within a stimulating working environment.

The University’s estate is undergoing the most significant transformation in its history. Cambridge has been able to create a new science and technology campus to the west of the city centre, and is now expanding further to the north west of Cambridge including investing in affordable homes for University key workers and community facilities. Even with our continued development, the University remains within walking or cycling distance across the campus. The University is a major partner on the Cambridge Biomedical Campus and we continue to redevelop our historic city centre sites demonstrating our determination to ensure that we can offer the best facilities and opportunities for our staff and students.

Family-friendly policies
The University recognises the importance of supporting its staff. We have a range of family-friendly policies to aid employees' work-life balance including a generous maternity, adoption and shared parental leave entitlement of 18 weeks full pay, and paid emergency leave for parents and carers.

Other family-friendly support includes:

Your wellbeing
The University’s Sport Centre, Counselling Services and Occupational Health are just some of the support services available to University employees to promote their physical and mental wellbeing. There are many societies in Cambridge catering for almost every taste and interest. Whether you want to take part in a sport, participate in music or drama, pursue a hobby, or join a political group, you will almost certainly find that a society exists for this purpose. The University also hosts the Cambridge Science Festival and Cambridge Festival of Ideas, as well as Open Cambridge weekend, which together attract over 50,000 visitors per year. The festivals are a great opportunity to get your first taste of public engagement, through volunteering, supporting hands-on activities or proposing a talk.

Development opportunities
We support new employees to settle in through various activities. The encouragement of career development for all staff is one of the University's values and we put this into practice through various services and initiatives. Our Personal and Professional Development Department provides development opportunities and courses for all University employees. These include face-to-face sessions, online learning modules and webinars. Employees may also apply for financial support to undertake training that will lead to a qualification. We offer reduced staff fees for University of Cambridge graduate courses and the opportunity to attend lectures and seminars held by University departments and institutions. The CareerStart@Cam programme also supports employees in assistant staff roles who do not hold higher education qualifications to develop their skills, experience and qualifications.
College Membership

The University, the Faculties and Departments, and the Colleges are linked in a complicated historical relationship that is mutually beneficial but not simple. Students (both graduate and undergraduate) are admitted by one of the 31 Colleges, although in the case of postgraduate students the Faculties and Departments determine admissions before the Colleges are involved. Almost all undergraduates, and many postgraduate students, live in a College.

The teaching of undergraduate students is shared between the Colleges and the Faculties and Departments, with the Colleges arranging small group teaching ("supervision") and the Departments providing lecturing, laboratory classes, and advanced supervisions. Most academic staff will also have the opportunity to join a College as a teaching or professorial fellow, and appointment to a College is a separate matter from a University appointment.

Membership of a College adds an important social and intellectual dimension for many of the academic staff. The Head of Department or senior colleagues can give more advice.

The Scheme for newly-appointed University Officers seeking a College Fellowship is set out at: https://www.ois.cam.ac.uk/uto-scheme/guidance-for-applicants
