The Regius Professorship of Civil Law
Faculty of Law

13 July 2021
Job Reference: JK26946
Regius Professorship of Civil Law

Background to the role
The Regius Professorship of Civil Law was founded by Henry VIII in 1540 and is the University’s longest established chair in law. It will become vacant on 30 September 2022 when the current holder, Professor David Ibbetson FBA, retires. Its most recent holders have included Professor Peter Stein and Professor David Johnston.

The field of Civil Law is of key strategic importance to the Faculty, both as it relates to Roman Law — which is currently taught to all undergraduate Law students by means of a compulsory first-year paper (with an additional, optional paper that is open to second- and third-year undergraduates) — and the law of modern civilian legal systems. The Faculty’s intention is to appoint a Regius Professor who will be in a position to lead and contribute to teaching and scholarship in the area of Roman Law and who may also have research and/or teaching interests in the law of modern civilian legal systems. The term ‘Civil Law’ as it is used in these Further Particulars should be understood accordingly.

Teaching and research (cont’d)
The Professor will be expected to pursue research and other activities in the field of Civil Law which enhances its growth as a field of scholarship. This includes fostering the work of colleagues within the University.

2) Examining
The Professor will be required to undertake such University examining as may be required by the Faculty Board.

3) Supervision
The Professor will be required to act as the supervisor of postgraduate students as and when requested.

4) Administration
Administrative duties are shared equitably among the teaching members of the Faculty. The Professors are expected to play significant roles from time to time on the Faculty Board, as Faculty Officers and on Faculty Committees dealing with such matters as academic and other appointments, admission of postgraduate students, research and teaching assessments, and library and information services arrangements. They are also encouraged to accept appointment to University Committees.

Standard Duties

1) Teaching and research
The Professor will take a leading role in organising and developing the Faculty’s teaching within the field of Civil Law. The Professor will be required to deliver lectures, seminars and other teaching within the Faculty with the expectation that the Professor, in common with other teaching staff, will offer some 40 hours of University teaching in the course of the academic year.

The Faculty of Law

The Squire Law Library is one of the largest academic law libraries in the United Kingdom, housing around 200,000 volumes and providing seats for over 400 readers. Additional support is found within the Cambridge Colleges, many of which have law collections, of varying extent, in their own libraries. The Squire also provides access to an extensive range of commercial electronic services including the Lexis Library, Westlaw UK, Heinonline and Justis and as well as to a significant array of law, and law-related, journals available via the University Library’s gateway, ejournals@cambridge. Some e-books for law are also accessible through the Newton Library catalogue.

Further information can be found on the Faculty website at: http://www.law.cam.ac.uk.

The Faculty of Law currently has 21 Professors, 13 Readers, 14 Senior Lecturers and around 40 other University, Faculty and College teaching officers. Almost every area of legal interest is represented. The Faculty has an IT team of six and an IT teaching and development officer. There are around 700 undergraduates, 200 Masters level students (LLM and MCL), and about 70 PhD students in the Faculty.

About the Faculty
The Faculty is housed in a striking modern building designed by Foster and Partners, which brings together on one site the Squire Law Library, the Faculty’s lecture and seminar rooms, and its administrative offices and common room facilities. The Institute of Criminology is housed in separate premises, as is the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law. The Centre for Business Research is housed in the Judge Business School building.
The School of the Humanities and Social Sciences

About the School

The School of the Humanities and Social Sciences is one of six schools in the University and is made up of the following institutions:

- Faculty of Economics
- Faculty of Education
- Faculty of History
- Faculty of Human, Social and Political Science (comprising: Department of Archaeology; Department of Social Anthropology; Department of Politics and International Studies; and Department of Sociology)
- Faculty of Law (including the Institute of Criminology)
- Department of History and Philosophy of Science
- Department of Land Economy

The School includes a wide range of disciplines with differing methodologies, from highly quantitative analysis of ‘big data’ to ethnography and the analysis of the material culture and thought of past societies. The geographical range is equally broad, with Centres of African, Latin American and South Asian Studies, and specialists within each Department or Faculty. Each institution has its own well-developed research profile, but increasingly we are working across disciplinary boundaries within the School and with colleagues in other Schools.

The School is participating in University-wide Strategic Research Initiatives such as public health, global food security, energy and conservation which bring the insights of social sciences to bear on some of the major issues facing the world today; Cambridge is one of the world’s leading centres for science, technology and medicine, and the social sciences are now playing an increasingly important role in understanding the social, political and economic contexts.

The School is, in terms of student numbers, the largest of the six Schools in the University.

The University of Cambridge is one of the world’s oldest and most successful universities. We are a renowned centre for research, education, and scholarship that makes a significant contribution to society. The University is consistently ranked amongst the top universities in the world. Our affiliates have won more Nobel Prizes than any other University.

Our sustained pursuit of academic excellence is built on a long history of first-class teaching and research within a distinctive collegiate system. For eight centuries our ideas and innovations have shaped the world. Our principal goal is to remain one of the world’s leading universities in an increasingly competitive global higher education sector. Today the University of Cambridge is at the centre of a cluster of over 4,300 businesses employing 58,000 people.

Our capital investment projects include the West Cambridge site, the North West Cambridge development and the growth of the Biomedical Campus in the south of the city. The North West Cambridge development includes the opening of a primary school – the first in the UK to be managed by a University. So we are deeply embedded in, and committed to serving, our local community. These are all conspicuous signs of a University that is not only adapting to new needs, but also anticipating the future.

Our mission is to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence. Our core values are:

- freedom of thought and expression; and
- freedom from discrimination.
About Us

The University is one of the world's leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country’s highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit students, provide student accommodation and deliver small group teaching.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching and conducting research.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany’s Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change — international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University’s make-up.

“Cambridge graduates and researchers have made – and continue to make – a colossal contribution to human knowledge and the understanding of the world around us. Their work touches on the lives and livelihoods of everyone from patients diagnosed with life-threatening diseases, to residents of areas critically affected by climate change, to children growing up in conflict zones. It has a lasting impact on our society, our economy and our culture: the world is truly a better place thanks to their efforts.”

Stephen Toope, Vice Chancellor 2019
Working at the University

We offer a variety of roles including academic, research, professional, managerial and support roles. We also offer extensive benefits and excellent learning opportunities within a stimulating working environment.

The festivals are a great opportunity to get your first taste of public engagement, through volunteering, supporting hands-on activities or proposing a talk.

We offer reduced staff fees for University of Cambridge graduate courses and the opportunity to attend lectures and seminars held by University departments and institutions. The CareerStart@Cam programme also supports employees in assistant staff roles who do not hold higher education qualifications to develop their skills, experience and qualifications.
College Membership

The University, the Faculties and Departments, and the Colleges are linked in a complicated historical relationship that is mutually beneficial but not simple. Students (both graduate and undergraduate) are admitted by one of the 31 Colleges, although in the case of graduate students the Faculties and Departments determine admissions before the Colleges are involved. Almost all undergraduates, and many graduate students, live in a College.

The teaching of undergraduate students is shared between the Colleges and the Faculties and Departments, with the Colleges arranging small group teaching (“supervision”) and the Departments providing lecturing, laboratory classes, and advanced supervisions. Most academic staff will also be invited to join a College as a teaching or professorial fellow.

Membership of a College adds an important social and intellectual dimension which many of the University's academic community find attractive. Most colleges expect their fellows to take part in undergraduate supervision and College administration. Appointment to a College fellowship is a separate matter from a University appointment, for which the College provides modest remuneration additional to University salary. It is not compulsory for academic staff to be a member of a College.

Further advice can be obtained from The Chair of the Faculty or senior colleagues.

The Scheme for newly-appointed University Officers seeking a College Fellowship is set out at:
