Department of Medicine

Closing date: 16 February 2023

Job Reference: RA35003

Sheila Joan Smith Professorship of Immunology

The Sheila Joan Smith Professorship of Immunology was established following a benefaction by Dr Herchel Smith in 1977. It has been held by Professors Peter Lachmann FRS and Douglas Fearon FRS. We are delighted to seek candidates to fill this established post, held in the Department of Medicine.

This endowed post is among the most prestigious in the School of Clinical Medicine, and we seek applicants that are recognised international leaders in an area of medical science related to immunology. Research is its major focus: this can be fundamental and/or translational in nature. There will be opportunities for teaching for appropriate candidates, and an expectation that the appointee will play a senior strategic leadership role. The ability to practice medicine in a speciality related to immunology or infection would be an advantage.

You will join the Cambridge Institute of Therapeutic Immunology and Infectious Disease (CITIID), which opened in 2019. CITIID houses 25 groups with expertise in autoimmune and inflammatory disease, fundamental immunology, and infectious disease research. CITIID has its main base in the new Jeffrey Cheah Biomedical Centre, but incorporates the Molecular Immunity Unit embedded within the MRC Laboratory of Molecular Biology and has a footprint in Addenbrooke's Hospital to facilitate clinical translation. The institute is centrally placed in the thriving Cambridge Biomedical Campus, home to Europe's largest internationally competitive concentration of health care-related talent and enterprise, including the 1100 bed Addenbrooke's Hospital, Royal Papworth Hospital, the MRC Laboratory of Molecular Biology and AstraZeneca's Global Research and Development Centre, among others.

CITIID is run from the Department of Medicine, the largest in the School of Clinical Medicine, which provides high quality research, teaching and patient care and has 36 Professors and over 450 directly employed staff and students. It currently holds competitive research grants of over £160M, and has strong strategic partnerships with the Wellcome Sanger Institute, the Babraham Institute and local pharmaceutical companies (GSK and AstraZeneca/ Medimmune) and the thriving biotechnology network that forms part of the Cambridge Cluster.

The Department of Medicine

The Department of Medicine provides high quality research, teaching and patient care. It has broad interests that are of relevance to human disease, aligning to clinical specialities within the NHS. Our work extends from basic biomedical research through to the clinic and is intimately linked to other scientists throughout the Cambridge Biomedical Campus, the UK and the wider internationally community. The Department is closely linked to Addenbrooke's Hospital, a major University Teaching Hospital with over 1,000 beds and a comprehensive range of regional services for the whole of the east of England. The Department also has links to the recently relocated Royal Papworth Hospital which is a national leader in organ transplant.

Research is the major focus of the Department, from fundamental biology through to disease mechanisms and clinical translation. The Department also has a major role in contributing to patient care at Addenbrooke's and Papworth hospitals. It has direct input into 18 medical speciality areas, with two-thirds of Principal Investigators being clinically active. A number of NHS employees with active research interests are also hosted within the Department, where they hold Associate PI status. The Department is also heavily involved in clinical student education and runs successful MPhil and PhD programmes. It therefore makes a major contribution to service delivery and education as part of Cambridge University Health Partners, and this integration is critical to its focus on improving healthcare throughout the UK and abroad.

The University

The University of Cambridge is one of the world's oldest and most successful universities. We are a renowned centre for research, education, and scholarship that makes a significant contribution to society. The University is consistently ranked amongst the top universities in the world. Our affiliates have won more Nobel Prizes than any other University.

Our sustained pursuit of academic excellence is built on a long history of first-class teaching and research within a distinctive collegiate system. For eight centuries our ideas and innovations have shaped the world. Our principal goal is to remain one of the world's leading universities in an increasingly competitive global higher education sector. Today the University of Cambridge is at the centre of a cluster of over 4,300 businesses employing 58,000 people.

Our capital investment projects include the West Cambridge site, the North West Cambridge development and the growth of the Biomedical Campus in the south of the city. The North West Cambridge development includes the opening of a primary school – the first in the UK to be managed by a University. So we are deeply embedded in, and committed to serving, our local community. These are all conspicuous signs of a University that is not only adapting to new needs, but also anticipating the future.

Our mission is to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence. Our core values are:

- freedom of thought and expression; and
- freedom from discrimination.

About Us

The University is one of the world's leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country's highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit students, provide student accommodation and deliver small group teaching.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching and conducting research.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany's Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University's make-up.

“Cambridge graduates and researchers have made – and continue to make – a colossal contribution to human knowledge and the understanding of the world around us. Their work touches on the lives and livelihoods of everyone from patients diagnosed with life-threatening diseases, to residents of areas critically affected by climate change, to children growing up in conflict zones. It has a lasting impact on our society, our economy and our culture: the world is truly a better place thanks to their efforts.”

Stephen Toope, Vice Chancellor 2019

Your wellbeing

The University's Sport Centre, Counselling Services and Occupational Health are just some of the support services available to University employees to promote their physical and mental wellbeing. There are many societies in Cambridge catering for almost every taste and interest. Whether you want to take part in a sport, participate in music or drama, pursue a hobby, or join a political group, you will almost certainly find that a society exists for this purpose. The University also hosts the Cambridge Science Festival and Cambridge Festival of Ideas, as well as Open Cambridge weekend, which together attract over 50,000 visitors per year. The festivals are a great opportunity to get your first taste of public engagement, through volunteering, supporting hands-on activities or proposing a talk.

Development opportunities

We support new employees to settle in through various activities. The encouragement of career development for all staff is one of the University's values and we put this into practice through various services and initiatives. Our Personal and Professional Development Department provides development opportunities and courses for all University employees. We offer reduced staff fees for University of Cambridge graduate courses and the opportunity to attend lectures and seminars held by University departments and institutions. The CareerStart@Cam programme also supports employees in assistant staff roles who do not hold higher education qualifications to develop their skills, experience and qualifications.

College Membership

The University, the Faculties and Departments, and the Colleges are linked in a complicated historical relationship that is mutually beneficial but not simple. Students (both graduate and undergraduate) are admitted by one of the 31 Colleges, although in the case of graduate students the Faculties and Departments determine admissions before the Colleges are involved. Almost all undergraduates, and many graduate students, live in a College.

The teaching of undergraduate students is shared between the Colleges and the Faculties and Departments, with the Colleges arranging small group teaching ("supervision") and the Departments providing lecturing, laboratory classes, and advanced supervisions. Most academic staff will also be invited to join a College as a teaching or professorial fellow.

Membership of a College adds an important social and intellectual dimension which many of the University's academic community find attractive. Most colleges expect their fellows to take part in undergraduate supervision and College administration. Appointment to a College fellowship is a separate matter from a University appointment, for which the College provides modest remuneration additional to University salary. It is not compulsory for academic staff to be a member of a College.

Further advice can be obtained from The Chair of the Faculty/Head of Department or senior colleagues.

The Scheme for newly-appointed University Officers seeking a College Fellowship is set out at: UTO Scheme | Office of Intercollegiate Services \(cam.ac.uk\)
