The His Majesty Sultan Qaboos Bin Said Professorship of Modern Arabic Studies

Background to the role
The His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said Professorship of Modern Arabic Studies was established in 2005 with a generous endowment from His Majesty Sultan Qaboos bin Said, the late sultan of Oman. The purpose of the Professorial Chair is to foster and promote study of Arabic and the modern Arab world as an integral part of the teaching and research activity of the Department of Middle Eastern Studies. Previous holders of the Chair are Professor Yasir Suleiman CBE, a renowned expert in Arabic socio-linguistics and a prominent national and international figure in modern Arabic studies, and Professor Khaled Fahmy, a highly regarded historian of the modern Arab world. We are now looking for a new post-holder to lead in the area of Modern Arabic Studies at the University of Cambridge.

Standard Duties

Teaching and research
The Professor will be required to deliver lectures and give instruction in the modern Arab world as a central part of the Middle East at all levels of the undergraduate tripos, and to both MPhil and PhD students and in particular to perform the following duties:

(i) to convene and/or lecture on one or more papers each year and offer supervisions as required, unless on sabbatical.

(ii) to undertake and publish original research and the general supervision of research and advanced work in their subject and Faculty/Department, and to assist students in their studies by supervision or informal instruction.

Examining
The Professor will be required to undertake such university examining as may be required by the relevant Faculty Board or comparable body.

Supervision
The Professor will be required to act as the supervisor of graduate students as and when requested.

Administration
Administrative duties are shared equitably among the teaching members of the Faculty. The expectation is that the appointee will take on the role of Head of the Department of Middle Eastern Studies in October 2025 for three years. In addition, Professors are expected to play significant roles from time to time on the Faculty Board and Faculty Committees dealing with such matters as academic and other appointments, admission of graduate students, research and teaching assessments, the libraries, and computing arrangements. They are also encouraged to accept appointment to University Committees. The Sultan Qaboos Professors in FAMES and Divinity liaise to foster relations with the Sultanate of Oman, and they make visits to the sultanate to share their research expertise.

The Department of Middle Eastern Studies (DMES) is located in the Faculty of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies (FAMES) together with the Department of East Asian Studies (DEAS).

The Department currently hosts the following posts in Arabic Studies: the Sir Thomas Adams’s Professorship of Classical Arabic, the His Majesty the Sultan Qaboos bin Sa’id Professorship of Modern Arabic Studies, a Professorship in the History and Culture of the Maghrib, a Professorship in Classical Arabic Studies, an Associate Professorship in Contemporary Middle Eastern Politics and Society, an Assistant Professorship in Modern Arabic Literature, and 2.5 language teaching posts in Modern Arabic. The Department also houses posts in Hebrew and Semitic Studies and Persian Studies and colleagues co-teach general courses on the Middle East.

The Headship of the Department, which currently includes being co-Chair of the Faculty of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, rotates on a triennial basis and it is expected that the new postholder would take on this responsibility in October 2025.

The Department has an excellent record of research and research grant capture. Its research strategy is based on a broad commitment to ‘Islam: a world civilisation’ under which several research clusters coalesce, ranging across classical Arabic intellectual culture, the material culture of the Middle East and North Africa, Persian manuscripts and their contents, medieval and modern literature, and the preservation of endangered Semitic languages. The Sultan Qaboos Professor has an important role within the Department’s research strategy as the leader of the research cluster in Modern Arabic, which includes a social scientist and a modern Arabic literature specialist and a number of post-doctoral fellows.
The Department has close ties with the HRH Prince Alwaleed Bin Talal Centre of Islamic Studies http://www.cis.cam.ac.uk whose previous two directors were HM Sultan Qaboos Professors. The new postholder will be encouraged to consider taking up this Directorship, if appropriate.

The Department currently admits about 25 undergraduates per year to study Arabic, Hebrew or Persian, often in combination with each other or a modern European language (MML). The Cambridge Middle Eastern Studies course is based on the principles that students must acquire a good knowledge of a Middle Eastern language to fully engage with the region’s history and culture and that informed understanding of the present requires engagement with the region’s history. We offer teaching in Arabic, Hebrew, Persian, and associated papers in the history, literatures and society of the Middle East. Postholders in Arabic therefore work closely and collaboratively with colleagues in Persian (3) and Hebrew (4). Students may also take Sanskrit or Hindi as a second language option.

The course (Tripos) is spread over four years, with the third year spent abroad in the country or countries of the Middle Eastern language(s) being studied. During the first year, Part IA, students engage in intensive language learning and take 1 or 2 papers introducing them to the pre-modern and modern Middle East respectively. In their second year, Part IB, students take 1 core paper in their chosen language(s) and choose from a selection of other papers in the literature, history and anthropology of the region. During their Year Abroad they enhance their spoken language skills and commence research for their final year dissertation. In their final year, Part II, students take 1 core paper in their chosen language(s) and then select from a range of more thematic papers informed by the research specialisms of academic staff, and write a supervised dissertation.

The Department also admits some 5 to 10 graduate students each year for study on its MPhil (Masters) and PhD programmes. The MPhil has recently been rebranded and all academic staff are expected to actively recruit graduate students. The Department also has a thriving post-doctoral community that includes Leverhulme and British Academy early-career fellows in a variety of fields related to the specialisms of permanent staff.

The University

The University of Cambridge is one of the world's oldest and most successful universities. We are a renowned centre for research, education, and scholarship that makes a significant contribution to society. The University is consistently ranked amongst the top universities in the world. Our affiliates have won more Nobel Prizes than any other University.

Our sustained pursuit of academic excellence is built on a long history of first-class teaching and research within a distinctive collegiate system. For eight centuries our ideas and innovations have shaped the world. Our principal goal is to remain one of the world's leading universities in an increasingly competitive global higher education sector. Today the University of Cambridge is at the centre of a cluster of over 4,300 businesses employing 58,000 people.

Our capital investment projects include the West Cambridge site, the North West Cambridge development and the growth of the Biomedical Campus in the south of the city. The North West Cambridge development includes the opening of a primary school – the first in the UK to be managed by a University. So we are deeply embedded in, and committed to serving, our local community. These are all conspicuous signs of a University that is not only adapting to new needs, but also anticipating the future.

Our mission is to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence. Our core values are:

- freedom of thought and expression; and
- freedom from discrimination.
About Us

The University is one of the world’s leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country’s highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit students, provide student accommodation and deliver small group teaching.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching and conducting research.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany’s Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University’s make-up.

“Cambridge graduates and researchers have made – and continue to make – a colossal contribution to human knowledge and the understanding of the world around us. Their work touches on the lives and livelihoods of everyone from patients diagnosed with life-threatening diseases, to residents of areas critically affected by climate change, to children growing up in conflict zones. It has a lasting impact on our society, our economy and our culture: the world is truly a better place thanks to their efforts.”

Stephen Toope, Vice Chancellor 2019
Working at the University

Working at Cambridge you will join a diverse, talented and innovative community, with more than 18,000 students and over 16,000 staff from all walks of life and corners of the world.

We offer a variety of roles including academic, research, professional, managerial and support roles. We also offer extensive benefits and excellent learning opportunities within a stimulating working environment.

The University’s estate is undergoing the most significant transformation in its history. Your wellbeing
The University’s Sport Centre, Counselling Services and Occupational Health are just some of the support services available to University employees to promote their physical and mental wellbeing. There are many societies in Cambridge catering for almost every taste and interest. Whether you want to take part in a sport, participate in music or drama, pursue a hobby, or join a political group, you will almost certainly find that a society exists for this purpose. The University also hosts the Cambridge Science Festival and Cambridge Festival of Ideas, as well as Open Cambridge weekend, which together attract over 50,000 visitors per year. The festivals are a great opportunity to get your first taste of public engagement, through volunteering, supporting hands-on activities or proposing a talk.

Development opportunities
We support new employees to settle in through various activities. The encouragement of career development for all staff is one of the University’s values and we put this into practice through various services and initiatives. Our Personal and Professional Development Department provides development opportunities and courses for all University employees. These include face-to-face sessions, online learning modules and webinars. Employees may also apply for financial support to undertake training that will lead to a qualification. We offer reduced staff fees for University of Cambridge graduate courses and the opportunity to attend lectures and seminars held by University departments and institutions. The CareerStart@Cam programme also supports employees in assistant staff roles who do not hold higher education qualifications to develop their skills, experience and qualifications.
College Membership

The University, the Faculties and Departments, and the Colleges are linked in a complicated historical relationship that is mutually beneficial but not simple. Students (both graduate and undergraduate) are admitted by one of the 31 Colleges, although in the case of graduate students the Faculties and Departments determine admissions before the Colleges are involved. Almost all undergraduates, and many graduate students, live in a College.

The teaching of undergraduate students is shared between the Colleges and the Faculties and Departments, with the Colleges arranging small group teaching ("supervision") and the Departments providing lecturing, laboratory classes, and advanced supervisions. Most academic staff will also be invited to join a College as a teaching or professorial fellow.

Membership of a College adds an important social and intellectual dimension which many of the University's academic community find attractive. Most colleges expect their fellows to take part in undergraduate supervision and College administration. Appointment to a College fellowship is a separate matter from a University appointment, for which the College provides modest remuneration additional to University salary. It is not compulsory for academic staff to be a member of a College.

Further advice can be obtained from The Chair of the Faculty/Head of Department or senior colleagues.

The Scheme for newly-appointed University Officers seeking a College Fellowship is set out at: [UTO Scheme | Office of Intercollegiate Services (cam.ac.uk)]
